Wyoming Attention Camp Program
Summary of Parent Evaluations
Summer 2005

Highlights

- During summer 2005, UPLIFT offered three sessions of its Wyoming Attention Camp Program: one in Cheyenne, one in Casper, and one in Lander. 174 parents completed an evaluation at nine of the twelve parent sessions at the three camps.
- This section of the report summarizes the results across all nine camps. See Appendices A and B for results by each of the three camps.
- Parents rated the parent sessions very positively (see Displays 1 and 2).
 - Between 82-95% rated each of six aspects of the workshop as “very good” or “excellent.”
 - The aspects rated highest:
 - The instructors knowledge (95% rated this aspect as “very good” or “excellent”)
 - The aspect rated lowest:
 - The handouts (82% rated this aspect as “very good” or “excellent”)
 - The content (83%)
 - The structure of the workshop (84%)
- A large majority of parents said they learned new skills (90%) and would recommend the workshop to others (97%) (See Display 3).
 - 65% of participants said the workshop “definitely” taught them new skills; 25% said it “probably” did; 10% said it “maybe” did.
 - 83% of participants said they would “definitely” recommend this workshop to others; 14% said they “probably” would; 3% said “maybe” they would.
- When asked to describe the best thing about the sessions: 79% mentioned the content, 75% mentioned STR and 75% mentioned interaction (see Display 4).
- When asked to describe how the workshop could improve: 24% said “nothing”; 11% mentioned a larger or different room; and 11% mentioned more information was needed (see Display 5).
